

Edwin G. Mercer
World War 1
Royal Newfoundland Regiment
Service No. 3597

Edwin was born on January 29th, 1900, in Whitbourne to parents John and Emily (?).

Edwin would enlist in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment on the 14th, April 1917 and once he was declared medically fit for service, he was assigned Service No. 3597.

His official enlistment papers provide us the following information about Edwin. First his name changes from Edwin to Edward and back again of a number of official correspondence papers. He gives his occupation as lumberman, more than likely a cooper it seems. He reads and writes as indicated by his signature and if his official birth date is correct, he would have been just 17 when he enlisted but he gives his age as 19. Like many young men of the day, Edwin lied to enlist.

Some of the documentation in his service file shows that he left Newfoundland on the “Florizel” on April 8th, 1914, to Halifax and then from there overseas to Great Britain. He finally joined the battalion on the 11th, of February 1918 in France. He saw action on the front lines in France and Belgium. The record notes specifically that he had been at the battles in Ypres and Passchendaele.

He spent time in hospital for minor hand wound and went to Winchester on the 9th of January 1919 to be sent home for demobilization. His discharge certificate No. 1560 shows a date of 18 April 1919.

He returned home and with his family moved to Bay Roberts, where he lived until his death in 1955.
