Stanley Atkins

The Royal Newfoundland Regiment

Regimental No. 4342

World War I

Born: 22 Aug 1898

Place of Birth: North River, Newfoundland

Parents: Benjamin and Rachel Atkins

Stanley enlisted in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment at St. John's on the 9th of February 1918. He is described as having black hair, grey eyes, 5 feet 7 inches tall, single and of the Church of England faith. He gave his trade as linesman and signed up for the duration of the war.

Stanley would serve in the Regiment from 9 Feb 1918 to 02 May 1919, about fifteen (15) months in total. During that time, he would see action in France, Belgium and Germany. He would be hospitalized several times ailing from pleurisy and on one occasion a gunshot wound to his left side and back. He would, however, survive and return home in May 1919.

Some excerpts from his official service record are provided here by date.

According to information found in his record, Stanley had previously been in service the Naval reserve, from December 1914 to the summer of 1917. Subsequent research shows that there was in fact a Stanley Atkins No. 1397X in the Naval Reserves.

Following his discharge, Stanley simply disappears, as there is no record of him found in any official Newfoundland documents researched.

In his service record, however, is a letter from the Secretary, Canadian Legion, Saskatoon, Sask. in 1930 with regard to Stanley. The assumption then becomes that Stanley was in Saskatchewan at that time, but this cannot be definitively confirmed.

What is known is that Stanley was married to a Dorothy Grace (Palmer) Atkins and that they had three (3) children. Stanley died on 03 Feb 1980. At the time, he was a resident of the Harbour Lodge Carbonear, Newfoundland. No burial site has been located
